[1] Software updates (follow up)

We released and uploaded version 4.1.3.0 of OWrite a few days ago, but it was pointed out to us that we had failed to upload the latest examples with the new version 4.1.3.0 javascript files. These script files are required for the new JS-Client features and bug fixes.

Please accept our apologies for this oversight. You may download the latest examples from

[2] EurOmnis 2018 Special Offers

Every year we prepare some special offers that are exclusive to EurOmnis attendees. Although it also serves as a general marketing strategy, our main aim has always been to support the EurOmnis events by providing additional incentive for developers to attend.

This year, we prepared offers to encourage the uptake of our Javascript client components. Our unlimited combined Desktop and JS-Client package deals were particularly well received. However, due to the large discounts already applied to the license fees (some of these discounts reduce the license fee to the mere level of maintenance and support fee), these discounts cannot be combined with further upgrade discounts. This may be disappointing for developers who have previously purchased some of the licenses that are included in the new discounted packages, but we are simply unable to reduce the already low prices of these packages even further.

However, we recognise that in some circumstances you may be paying for maintenance and support twice for some licenses if you have current active maintenance and support subscriptions. Therefore, in the spirit of fairness, we are happy to offset the remaining value of your current maintenance and support subscriptions. We will calculate the fee to be offset at the time you place your order. For example, if you had paid €900 for your current OWrite maintenance subscription and six months remain at the time you order the new OWrite discounted package, we would reduce the package price by a further €450 (which is the value of the remaining 6 months maintenance).

If you are interested in our discounted EurOmnis packages, please contact sales@brainydata.co.uk so we may provide you with a price for the package you are interested in, after subtracting any applicable subscriptions.

Yours sincerely,

Michael Monschau (Director)
